THE MENDEL PLANT.

We were this week shown through the Mendel plant by Manager Walker, and had our eyes opened considerably as to the extent and quality of the work turned out there. At the time of our visit all the box factory men were engaged in moving raw material out of the reach of high water which threatened everything on the ground.

The veneering plant, however, was running full blast and the speed with which tobacco box headings were being turned out was a surprise. Only one veneering machine has as yet been installed, but two more are on their way and will soon be in. The one now running turns out about 35,000 headings per day, about two car loads. Rough logs enter the plant from the river and emerge at the other end as a completed article. Everything is run by steam power and every appliance is utilized for the conservation of labor. The logs are drawn out of the water by an endless chain, sawed to the required length by a steam crosscut saw, elevated into the veneering machine by a traveling crane, and cut into very thin boards with greater rapidity than would be considered possible by one not having seen the machine in operation. These thin boards are dried in hot air furnaces and glued together by numberless men and boys who have the advantage of all the latest improved machinery, sawed to the proper size and shape, done up in bundles of 50 each and loaded into freight cars, whence they are carried to the factory at Louisville and made into completed boxes.

Upon the installation of the other two veneering machines, the completed tobacco box will be manufactured here. Until that time the entire product goes to Louisville. The plant is kept in an excellent sanitary condition, and every precaution is taken against accidents.

Smoking is not allowed inside the high fence which encloses the entire 90 acres occupied by the plant, numerous fire extinguishers are placed at different handy places to be used when occasion demands, and other measures looking to the safety of things are observed.

The present number of men employed is about 175, and it is thought that 375, or perhaps more, will be at work when the plant is running full blast. The pay day is weekly and amounts, in round numbers, to about $2,000.

The Mendel company now has about 10,000,000 feet of logs on the river banks in the neighborhood of Hickman, having bought some $2,800 worth last week. Owing to the high water they stand to lose many of them, although they have a large number of men employed looking after their safety. The watching of these logs costs them about $150 per day during the high water.

"Hits a hard thing ter know what ter do wid yo' money," said Brother Dickey. "Ef you puts it in de bank, de bank liable ter bust wid it; ef you bures it in de groun', a yearthquake is liable ter swaller it; ef you spen' it on yo'se'f dey'll say you a fool; ef you 'trow it away' you a bigger fool still; ef you give ter de po' en needy, you don't give half enough; en ef you give all, you sho' mns' be crazy, en or ter be in de lunatic asylum! My, nay, - but money is a trouble!"
